

Marx's Doctorate
with Living Experience – How
the World is Really Appearing
– Clinamen (1856)

By Karl Marx

Table of Contents

Poetry – the word
system, surface,
systems of
surface-worlds,
forms of compossible situations – all things joined to following clinamens – just to be a Epicurean

person with a clinamen to love.

I. Epicurus,
intermundus,
where the Gods dwell,
perhaps in a high life and free therefore

II. Merchant
capital at the

pores of society, being Jewish and working on books, miserly, against sharing
this with other people who harm the merchant
enterprise,

even onlookers.

III. A process of simple wage
labour, production of wage by newspaper formats, and types of selling
bundies.

IV. Forms of Life
– experiences.

V. What then is a pure experience –
just the world around – think here of Retamar – how can one organize the process of

Cubanism and such perception as in fact looking at the commodities
being produced in a shop, chopping onions for a pizza in a
efficient shop

and pouring sauce on the peporoni –
qualities abound – and quantities – in fact then form surfaces out of
the price, and perhaps out of the simple wage.

VI. Process the wage, process
the billing, process the world of this type of base
and superstructure
– form a Jewish mind – this cheap process is then

mediated by a
logic –
comparisons
called series,
which then
means in fact price-series in the irrelevant
sense of a small shop
price series – small and

cheap labour running its small series and its dynamics.

VII. Absorb the world –
understand by lived experience –
the poorest

will win by the Party

VIII. Process of companies and international capitalism in finance – just a scale, just a economics of scale perhaps.

IX. Join surfaces
all of this is

double-click photography
when there is a simple Jewish experience -
just that sense of a friendship
and lover.

I. Essence, must Appear

So in fact the hidden abode of production must appear as commodity-form analysis, which then merges in one go, the capitalists and labourers in a juxtaposition called clinamen –

which is the poem logic of in fact my own life.

II. The Clinamen Supervenes to an Chance
which meets out of Necessity

I mean the chance
to meet a lover,
that is all.
